Songwriters in the Round

Roy Schneider has been performing his original music for the past two decades. His songs have thrice made him a Kerrville New Folk finalist, and he was a contestant on NBC's The Voice in 2013. Reviewers have described Kim Mayfield's music as 'pleasantly invoking the legendary Tammy Wynette,' and 'haunted by Patsy Cline.' Ray Cerbone's storyteller style takes the listener to another place in time. Tickets $20

John Butler

Thur. July 21 • 7 p.m.

Little Fools

John Butler first played music for money during the Johnson administration, and his songwriting has garnered prizes at the Kerrville New Folk competition, the Will McLean Music Festival and the South Florida Folk Festival. When she was three years old, vocalist Susan Chastain made her musical debut atop her mother's bar in Oklawaha, Florida. Since then, this Detroit Music Award winner has sung in combos ranging from casual duos to a 25-year stint with a Big Band. Susie Hulcher is an energetic vocalist, compelling songwriter and versatile bassist and guitarist. Together Butler, Chastain and Hulcher create rich harmony as Little Fools. Tickets $20

Brian Smalley, Guitarist

A lifelong guitar player with a wildly creative imagination, Brian Smalley has developed a style that is complex, unique and inimitable. His songs borrow from folksy flat pick guitar and new-grass as well as a touch of new-age acoustic music.

Brian Smalley

A great many of his soulful, earthy songs are set in and inspired by Florida – a state of mind and a state of nature that he loves to write about and longs to see preserved. Tickets $20
